2 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Detailed Research on the Korean Chaebol By Wong Yin Shing This is an excellent and a very detailed report on one of the Korean Chaebol, Hyundai. You will understand how the Korean economy is structured and operating in South Korea and why they have the problems facing today. Also very valuable is the part on the difference between Japanese and Korean business operation in the States. It reminds the rest of the world about what difficulties would be encountered and what issues should be pay attention to.

This study focuses on a single Korean "chaebol", the business conglomerate which dominates the Korean economy. Hyundai, the largest chaebol, is examined in the context of Korean history, ancient and modern, and the Confucian value system that permeates all Korean life.

From Library Journal Drawing from his 20-plus years of journalistic experiences in the region, Kirk reports on Hyundai, Korea's largest business conglomerate (or chaebol). Kirk examines the Hyundai group in the context of Korean history, social and political systems, and business. A central feature of his well-written work is the controversial business and political life and career of Hyundai's founder, Chung Ju Yung, age 78. Based on the author's personal interview, discussions with executives both inside and outside of Hyundai, and public information, the work takes an unauthorized look at a number of the leading companies within the Hyundai group. This storylike account of Korea's largest chaebol, which is told in the context of Korea's rise from a Third World to a world-class economic power, complements Mark Clifford's Troubled Tiger (LJ 8/94). Recommended for executives, scholars, and students of business and the social sciences. Joseph W. Leonard, Miami Univ., Oxford, Ohio Copyright 1994 Reed Business Information, Inc.
