From Emerald Group Publishing Limited : Labour Mobility in the Enlarged Single European Market (Comparative Social Research) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Labour Mobility in the Enlarged Single European Market (Comparative Social Research):

The 2004 reunification of Eastern and Western Europe and the subsequent economic crisis caused a surge in intra-

European labour mobility and a profound shift in preceding patterns of migration in Europe. While previous decades of European integration brought very modest cross-border flows of labour, the past decade has engendered the largest European movements of labour in modern time ndash; mostly from East to West, but eventually also from South to North. In a situation of record high European unemployment, this has sparked controversy about the very notion of free movement, one of the basic foundations of the European Community, and has unleashed heated debates about the conditions, causes, and consequences of large-scale labour migration for receiving as well as sending societies. Against this background, this volume of Comparative Social Research will contribute to improve our understanding of the drivers, mechanisms, and effects of the past decadersquo;s surge in cross-border labour mobility and work related migration within Europe.

Editors Dolvik and Eldring present readers with a collection of research and academic perspectives on contemporary issues involving labor mobility in the enlarged European market. The selections that make up the main body of the text are devoted to transnational labor mobility, new patterns of labor migration in Europe, policy responses to emigration from the Baltic states, and other related subjects. Jon Erik Dolvik and Line Eldring are with the Fafo Institute for Labour and Social Research in Norway. Distributed in North America by Turpin Distribution. --Annotation copy;2017 Ringgold Inc.
